At the commencement of business hours Monday Chicago elevators contained 11,853,933 bushels of wheat, 3,854,388 bushels of corn, 977,076 bushels of oats, 135,000 bushels of rye and 317,458 bushels of barley, making a grand total of 16,175,905 bushels of grain, against 16,175,505 bushels a week ago and 16,012,917 bushels at this period last year.

Rev. Dr. Edward McGinn, pastor of St. Stephen's Roman Catholic church, New York, has been summoned to Rome to answer for his inebriation in connection with the advocacy of Henry George's opinions after they had been denounced by the Archbishop. Undoubtedly, according to the tenets of discipline of the Roman Catholic church, Dr. McGinn is an offender, although he only exercised the inalienable right to express his opinion on a great public question. Henry Georgeism is opposed to the teachings of the Catholic church, and Dr. McGinn was undoubtedly aware of this when he espoused it. He says he will not go to Rome, and he may prefer to be turned out of his pastorate to recanting his views.

Whatever becomes of the New York fund collected for the purpose of rearing a monument to ex-President Arthur, the memory of that gentleman and patriot will not be forgotten at the capital. At the meeting of the vestry of St. John's Episcopal church, that city, last week, arrangements were made for the erection of a tablet in his honor directly at the base of the memorial window to his wife, Ellen Herndon Arthur, in the south transept of the church. The window, ordered from abroad several years ago by the ex-president, is a double one, the upper half representing the arrival of the four Marys at the tomb of Christ. The position of this window is directly at the side of the pew owned by the Herndon family, in which Mrs. Arthur attended service each Sunday from the time when, as a little child, her father, Captain Herndon, first took her there.

"Three brides of distinguished public men will enter society here this winter, and curiosity is expressed as to the positions they will take," says a Washington letter to the Boston Globe. "The prettiest of the three is the young wife of Congressman Loux. In appearance she is fairly tall, with a little, girlish figure which hardly seems developed into womanhood. The bride of Justice Stanley Matthews will not need any preliminary training to take a high place in society here. She is a middle-aged woman, tall, queenly and handsome. Mrs. is intellectually the superior of nine tenths of the society women here, and has quite a penchant for literature. Comptroller Durham's wife is the third of the bridal trio. She is, like Mrs. Matthews, of middle life; is rather short and stout and has some silver threads in her hair, and one or two intrusive wrinkles can be detected on her face. Still her features are pleasant, and she dresses in excellent taste."

The New York Times says: "The long controversy in the Southern Presbyterian church about the Rev. Dr. Woodrow and the doctrine of evolution ends at last with the formal removal of the obnoxious professor from his chair in the Columbia Theological Seminary. The question about Woodrow's teachings, or as the Presbyterians have it, about the origin of Adam's body, has been passed around from Synod to Synod, and has vexed the general assembly, but now the four Synods controlling the seminary unit in dismissing the professor, who refused to resign. The depressing effect of the controversy upon the seminary is shown by the statement that it has been closed for a year and that all the chairs except one are vacant. Some of the professors left the seminary to become the prosecutors of Woodrow. The deposed professor is a man of great force and eloquence, and he has fought his opponents with remarkable pertinacity and skill. But the church will not accept the theory of Darwin and Spencer, even if it be modified as to the origin of man. The professor is at last compelled to step down and out. Possibly, however, the church has not heard the last of evolution, for recent proceedings show that a respectable minority of the ministers of the church do defend the deposed professor and hold opinions like him."

In alluding to the recent train robbery in Texas, the Milwaukee Sentinel remarks: "The detailed reports of the latest Texas train-robbery are ostentatious to make one disgusted with the average collection of railway passengers. Three men compelled more than forty male passengers, a dozen of whom were well armed, including five United States soldiers, to hold up their hands and give up their valuables. One robber took charge of the conductor, the engineer, the fireman, the porter, the baggage-man and the tankman and made them stand in line, while the two other robbers went through the coaches, in which were thirty or forty men besides the women, and compelled them to unload. The passengers had ample notice of the coming of the robbers, and the five soldiers pulled their guns and were ready for business, but the male passengers begged piteously that the soldiers should not shoot as it might excasperate the two robbers. The women alone had any courage. Mrs. Wittick, of Carthage, Mo., indignantly saying: 'Are forty men going to submit to this outrage at the hands of two highwaymen?' Her husband tried to suppress her, but she exclaimed: 'It's a burning shame that every one sit quietly by without a thought of resistance!' And then all the men sat on her, for fear she would exasperate the robbers. It is no wonder that train robbery is a popular business in the southwest.

A HORROR ON THE RIVER.

FIRE LICKS UP A MISSISSIPPI STEAMER IN A FEW MINUTES.

And Forty Lives Are Quenched by the Flames and in the Dark Waters.

The Passengers, Aboard at Midnight by the Clang of the Bell, Vainly Seek a Refuge from the Destroyer—A Father Throws His Children Overboard and Then Perishes in the Flames with His Wife—Statements of Survivors.

New York, Dec. 15.—A dispatch from New Orleans says: The steamer M. White was burned to the water's edge about 11 o'clock Monday night at Point Canes plant. Exactly how the fire originated is a mystery. In a few minutes the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to stay their course, and in a short time nothing was left of the finest boat on the lower Mississippi. It is impossible now to give the names of all who were burned or drowned, but it is known that between thirty-five and forty passengers and boat hands lost their lives.

The steamer was valued at $100,000, and insured for $27,500, principally by New Orleans companies. The cargo was valued at $150,000; insurance unknown.

From interviews with officers and men of the ill-fated steamer, the following details of the disaster have been obtained:

The White was hauled up to the bank and thirty or forty rowboats were getting cottonseed aboard when Watchman Tom Miller began to ring the alarm bell and shout: "Fire! Fire! Fire!" Great confusion ensued. Employers ran quickly about to wake up the sleeping passengers, who hurried out partly dressed and panic-stricken. Second Engineer Tom Barry was the man who first saw the fire. It was in a cotton seed bin amidships. He ran to the bin and saw the flames rising and the smoke coming from the bin and stayed at his post until driven away by the advancing flames.

William McGraw, chief engineer, was asleep in the box, being awakened by the clanging bell, sprang from his bed and groped his way through the smoke to the forward part of the boat to arouse his partner, John Palmer, second assistant engineer. McGraw, Palmer, about thirty other men then began to search through the suffocating smoke for the others who slept in the boxes. They were unable to discover any one and, believing all had escaped but themselves, they groped their way to the stern, from whence they climbed down on one side of the stanchions to the right side of the boat and escaped to the shore.

Two streams of water had been brought to play upon the fire and the engineers fought the flames step by step, but were finally forced to drop the hose and save themselves. Head Clerk McVay was in his cabin when he heard the first alarm. He had barely time to get out of his cabin before the flames were upon him and the most valuable part of the ship was burning. He then ran out and devoted himself to efforts to save the passengers. He says there were eight or ten men in his cabin, of whom he saved two. McGraw and Palmer made a rapid run of the stern cabin passengers, of whom they saved two. McGraw and Palmer were crowded together on the deck, most of whom were clad only in their night garments, a gentleman who was recognized as the superintendent of the Vidalia Southern railroad, who was traveling with his wife and two little girls, 9 and 12 years old. As the roaring flames came near the group, the father, seeing that they would be burned to death if they remained on the deck, he lifted his girls one after the other and threw them into the water. He was urging his wife to take the leap when a burst of flames enveloped them. They soon fell, apparently suffocated by inhaling the fire and smoke, and were found on the shore and buried in the morning.

John Stout and John Smith, the pilot on watch, were in the pilot house and were compelled to jump into the river, where they were picked up. They had a narrow escape from death. So quick was the spread of the flames that it was impossible to see who escaped and who perished. While they were escaping as best they could, the steamship burst. The force of the explosion was terrific. Many ladies and gentlemen were thrown high in the air where they revolved several times and then fell into the river. Just after the explosion shrieks were heard coming from the stern of the boat. Two colored women were seen enveloped by the flames. A moment later they had fallen and disappeared.

The rescued were picked up by the steamer Stella Wild. As the last were being hoisted on board, four kegs of powder on board blew up and buried the burning cotton in all directions. This virtually put the fire out, as but little was left to burn. A minute or two after the explosion a cry for aid was heard from the steamer. A boat was lowered from the Stella Wild and put in the direction of the cry for help. A man was sent through the darkness clinging to a cotton bale, but just as the boat was nearing him, the bale turned over, the man's hold was loosened and he sank to rise no more. The statement of William McGraw, the chief engineer of the M. White, is as follows: "At about 11:20 o'clock Monday night, while standing at Dr. Ferris's place above the postoffice landing at Point Canes, at which place the boat was loading cotton seed, fire broke out amidships on top of the cotton below the boiler deck. Engineers Barry and Jenny, who were on watch at the time, gave the alarm. Tom Miller, the watchman, gave the alarm by ringing the bell, and Clerks Callahan and Hill at once aroused the people in the cabin. The fire spread rapidly and in less than fifteen minutes the boat had burned to the water's edge. There were four kegs of powder in the magazine, and the moment the fire reached them the flames shot up over 100 feet high. The sight was the most heartrending one I have ever seen. Human beings being the situation of the women and children for help was given. I saw the superintendent of the Vidalia railroad standing at outside the ladies' cabin, throwing his two pretty babies into the water. He stood there and watched the death with his wife. Among those lost are Louis Baker, second cook; Owen Ames, porter; Dick Randolph, fireman, and Capt. West. Floyd. A prize of ten tons taken out at Vidalia; were burned to death and two of the five keepers also perished. There were in the cabin nine lady passengers and about eight men."

boy; John Parker, Perry Williams, cabin boy; Amos Morse, porter; Edward Jackson, cabin boy; Jenny Walker, chambermaid; Martha Washington, chambermaid; Darius Fort, cook; two negro preachers; a negro woman and her son; from Port Hiday; Volin Bell, laborer; two negro women, each with a baby. It is thought that William Daily of Cuto county, Nebraska, and Mr. Oberheim, of Kentucky, are lost.

Miss McCabe's sister made a remarkable escape. She says Capt. Floyd lost his life trying to rescue the women. All the white passengers of the boat escaped. Mr. J. E. Carew and his wife, of Oshkosh, Ill., escaped. The following were saved, all slightly injured: John Stahl, the pilot; Horace Smith and Mrs. Smith, of Jucina, Wis.; a gentleman and his wife, from Chicago, name unknown.

THE RELIEF OF CHARLESTON.

Amount of Money Subscribed and What Was Done with It.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 15.—The earthquake relief committee, headed by Mayor Courtenay, chairman, made a formal report to the city council Tuesday night of the total amount contributed by the country in general for the relief of the earthquake sufferers. The committee has been very successful in its work, and the report of the following facts are obtained:

The total amount of the various sums received by the committee up to date aggregated $315,000. Of this sum New York city contributed $152,073; New York state, outside of New York city, about $100,000. Boston's contribution was $70,000; Baltimore, $27,000; New Orleans, $7,000; San Francisco, $10,000. The remainder was contributed by the other states and territories of the Union, nearly every one of which sent something.

In addition to the above, handsome sums were received from many countries of the Old World. The citizens of South Carolina contributed to the relief fund $13,000 and Charleston $3,000. The following considerable amounts were contributed by private parties, for rebuilding churches, schools and charitable institutions: To Episcopal churches, $35,000; Roman Catholic, $30,000; Presbyterian, $15,000; Baptist, $10,000; Methodist, $8,400; Evangelical, $6,100; Lutheran, $5,000; Baptist Synagogue, $8,000; Hebrew Benevolent society, $4,500; Confederate home, $5,000; Medical college, $25,000; other charitable organizations, $30,000.

For Masonic relief, $15,000.

From the above, the committee have furnished food, houses and clothing for 13,000 persons who otherwise would have been destitute. The balance remaining on hand is now $180,000, and from this amount the committee have appropriated $80,000 to complete repairs to injured houses, and the remainder is to be devoted to building a city hospital in place of the one destroyed by the earthquake. Two new hospitals will be a memorial to the beneficent charity of the American people.

A CALL FOR STANLEY.

King Leopold Requires His Immediate Presence in Belgium.

New York, Dec. 15.—Henry M. Stanley made all preparations Tuesday for starting to Europe. He has engaged passage by the Elder, of the North German Lloyd steamship line. He had a conference with Maj. Pond, the manager of his steaming tour in this country, and offered to return as soon as his business with the king of the Belgians was settled. There is a possibility that Stanley may not go to Africa, but being simply the advocate of King Leopold in his administration of the free Congo state, and has never been allowed full control of the African business.

At the farewell banquet given at Delmonico's Tuesday night, by Mr. Henry S. Wallcut, Stanley said: "I have said to my friends to bid me good-bye for the thousands of Americans for whom kindness is desired to make due acknowledgment of the help received a very flattering reply, for which he felt deeply grateful. The letter he referred to was from Finley Anderson, who was the representative of the New York Herald in London when Stanley was in the city, and who had been intimate with him in the purchase of clothing, Rosenberg being a tailor. The affidavit stated that the affiant had heard Rosenberg express sympathy for the boodlers and the wrong done to the money under the same circumstances. Rosenberg said that said action on the affidavit must be taken at a later stage of the trial, and Mr. Tracy spoke a four-hour speech for the defense. It is probable that Rosenberg will be indicted for perjury."

A Carrion Juryman.

New York, Dec. 15.—Another sensation was developed in the McQuade trial Tuesday, when District Attorney Martine read the affidavit of Messrs. Vickerman and Nesbit charging that Juror Rosenberg was a particular friend of two or three of the older man's boodlers. The two men were in the employ of Rosenberg, a few months ago and have recently set up in business for themselves. They both state that Rosenberg was intimate with two of the boodlers, and that he had been in the purchase of clothing, Rosenberg being a tailor. The affidavit stated that the affiant had heard Rosenberg express sympathy for the boodlers and the wrong done to the money under the same circumstances. Rosenberg said that said action on the affidavit must be taken at a later stage of the trial, and Mr. Tracy spoke a four-hour speech for the defense. It is probable that Rosenberg will be indicted for perjury."

The Indianapolis Alleged Fraud.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 15.—In the case of the alleged election frauds for which Chairman Coffey and other prominent Democrats are under arrest, the United States commissioner Tuesday held that he had jurisdiction to examine the defendants upon the charges made. The defendants waived examination, but the commissioner denied the waiver and proceeded to take evidence. A Republican judge of election swore that the said Coffey was at his precinct had been tampered with.

Nine Million in Bonds Negotiated.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 15.—President W. D. Washburn, of the Minneapolis, St. Paul, and North Western, confirmed the report that $9,000,000 bonds of that road have been negotiated, and that, in connection with the Canadian Pacific, it will build a bridge at St. Louis, Mo.

A Schooler and Crew Missing.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Dec. 15.—Much anxiety is felt for the safety of the schooner Lizzie J. Call and crew of seven, who were away here Nov. 23 for Baltimore with a cargo of 2,100 barrels of apples. She has not been heard from since Nov. 23.

Anecdote of Post Poe.

I only remember once seeing him (Edgar A. Poe, the poet in liquor, and on that occasion he staggered up and began upbraiding me for not half-memorial, half-earnest passion for not accepting a poem of his. I told him I should have been glad to, but couldn't afford to pay him a fair price, and he raised the siege by remarking that this was his nearest approach to a smile: "It was a great mistake, Sargent (sic, great mistake! It would have been 'mortalized you, sir—'mortalized you' Sargent."

Better Than Some Men.

In a recent speech in Boston Gen. Hawley said: "I think that the man who looks into the great broad face and dark brown eyes of a New England ox has better company than he has with some of the men of considerable intellect."—Chicago Times.
